

Mother's Day and Memorial Day

What Three Things Do Mother's Day and Memorial Day Have in Common?

The first one's easy. They both happen in May. The second one's easy. They both start with the letter "M".

But it's the third commonality that really sets the tone for both Observances., and that is the fact that they were both inspired at around the same time by people who were moved to do something when they observed Mothers, placing flowers on the graves of their fallen sons - killed during the Civil War.
